To cure the Itch. The best medicine yet known for the Itch is sulphur, which ought to be used externally and internally. The parts affected may be rubbed with an Ointment made of flour of sulphur two ounces, crude sal ammoniac, finely powdered, two drams; hogs lard four ounces; half a dram of the essence of lemon. About the bulk of a nutmeg may be rubbed upon the extremities, at bed-time, thrice a week.

ECLIPSES for the Year 1781.

THE first is of the Sun, April 23d, visible as follows:

	H.	M.
Beginning at	12	14	} Mean time.
Greatest obscuration	1	28
End	2	41

Digits eclipsed, about four.

The second is of the Sun, October 17th, about four o'clock in the morning, invisible.

FLATTERY. There is nothing more universally prevalent than flattery. Persons who discover the flatterer, do not always disapprove him, because he imagines them considerable enough to deserve his applications. It is a tacit sort of compliment, that he esteems them to be such as it is worth his while to flatter.

JANUARY. The FIRST MONTH.

ON LIFE.

AH! what is life with ill's incompass'd round?
 Amidst our hopes, fate strikes the sudden wound:
 To-day th' statesman of new honour dreams,
 To-morrow death destroys his airy schemes.
 Is mouldy treasure in thy chest confin'd?
 Think all that treasure thou must leave behind;
 Thy heir with smiles shall view the blazon'd herse,
 And all thy hoards with lavish hands disperse;

FEBRUARY. The SECOND MONTH.

Should certain fate th' impending blow delay,
 Thy mirth will sicken, and thy bloom decay;
 Then feeble age will all thy nerves disarm,
 No more thy blood its narrow channels warm.
 Who then would wish to stretch this narrow span,
 To suffer life beyond the date of man?

Like to the falling of a star,
 Or as the flights of eagles are;

with stroking his ruffles ; another had his eyes fixed upon the fire ; a third sat patting his knee. In fine, had the court of dullness to have been represented in a picture, the painter might have taken it to the life from us in our different attitudes.

Aristo was the first of the whole company who awaked from this lethargy of mind, and looking round, What, said he, are you all retired into yourselves ? Come, ladies, I will propound a question to you, and will expect every one of you to answer in turn. What, setting aside faith, the grace of God, and all things appertaining to religion, do you think the most desirable thing in life ? And first, addressing himself to Aspasia, I desire your opinion, Madam.

I know not answered she modestly why you should expect me to speak first, when there are so many in company much more capable of answering ; but since you enjoin it, shall not hesitate to tell you, that according to my judgment there is nothing so desirable as Grandeur.

Your reason, Madam ! rejoined Aristo. Because, said she, it attracts the

 Or silver drops of morning dew;
 Or like a wind that chafes the flood;
 Or bubbles which on water stood;
 Ev'n such is man, whose borrow'd light
 Is straight call'd in, and paid to night.
 The wind blows out; the bubble dies;
 The spring entomb'd in autumn lies;

He then turned to her that sat next, who subscribed to the same opinion Aspatia had given, that high births and titles were the first things to be wished for on earth; but, on his speaking to the third, I cannot, said she, think with these ladies: Beauty seems to me to have infinitely the preference over every other blessing we can be possessed of, because it attracts the love and admiration of all who see it.

Now would heaven grant my prayers, cried Lamara hastily, it would be to endue me with a superiority of Wit, because wit enables us to defend ourselves if attacked, and to offend others when we have a mind, without their daring to retort.

Well, above all things, give me Riches, said Lestesia; riches can purchase all things; they supply all the defects of birth, of beauty, of wit, and command more followers than all of them put together. In fine, whoever has them has every joy this world can give; it is all, and all in all, as Mr. Dryden has made Jupiter say, —

APRIL. The FOURTH MONTH.

The dew dries up; the star is shot;
The flight is past; and man forgot.

ON LOVE.

—There is in love a power,
There is a soft divinity that draws transport
Even from distress; that gives the heart
A certain pang, excelling far the joys
Of gross unfeeling life.

Love warms our fancy with enliv'ning fires,
Refines our genius, and our verse inspires;
From him Theocritus on Enna's plains,
Learnt the wild sweetness of his Doric strains;
Virgil by him was taught the moving art,
That charm'd each ear, and soften'd ev'ry heart.

ON PIETY.

Whose smiles can calm the horrors of despair.

JUNE. The SIXTH MONTH.

Bid in each breast unusual transports flow,
 And wipe the tears that stain the cheek of woe :
 How blest the man who leaves each meaner scene,
 Like thee, exalted, smiling, and serene !
 Whose rising soul pursues a nobler flight,
 Whose bosom melts with more refin'd delight ;
 Whose thoughts, elate with transports all sublime,
 Can soar at once beyond the views of time :

AUGUST. The EIGHTH MONTH

How oft by the streams in the wood,
Delighted she'd ramble and rove,
And while she stood marking the flood,
Would tune up a stanza of love.

Her dress was a garment of green,
Set off with a border of white,
And all the day long might be seen,
Like a bird that is always in flight.

SEPTEMBER. The NINTH MONTH.

In rural diversion and play,
Her summers glid smoothly along,
And her winters pass'd briskly away,
Cheer'd up with a tale or a song.

At length a destroyer came by,
A youth of more person than parts ;
Well skill'd in the arts of the eye,
The conquest and havoc of hearts.

DECEMBER. The Twelfth MONTH.

And, upward still, our search will prove
 Each link'd again to that above.
 Heav'n when it had created man,
 Unfinish'd saw creation's plan;
 Though man and angel were akin,
 Here yet appear'd some gap between,
 Nor would the links together meet,
 Till Woman did the chain complete.

Work to be done in GARDENS in the month of March.

SOW radishes, fiesia, imperial, and cabbage lettuce: Plant peas and beans: Make your beds of mint, balm, thyme, savory, sage, penny-royal, tansey, rue, and other durable herbs for household use, except lavender and rosemary, which are best deferred till April: Refresh the cucumber and melon beds with hot dung; and you may sow towards the latter end of the month for a full crop; sow cabbages and favoys for plants, to be transplanted; as also sellery for early blanching: Towards the middle of this month rake and dress asparagus beds; the buds of which will shoot in April; and now you may make new beds of asparagus in ground prepared for that purpose: Towards the end of this month, sow upon hot beds purslane and nasturtium; sow fallads, leeks, beets, fennel, dill and burnet; dress up strawberry beds, keeping them clean from runners, till the plants blossom, giving them water when necessary; slip and set sage, and where the soil is clay, or over-moist, mingle it with brick-dust. Water all young planted herbs carefully in the morning; destroy all weeds before they run to seed; and before the end of the month your garden ought to be completely cropped. Put French beans in warm ground, where they may be defended from cold winds; but do this in dry weather, because too much moisture will make them rot in the ground.

In the Fruit Orchard. In this month of March finish the plantation of fruit trees, and fill up all vacancies; also compleat the pruning of peaches: The beginning of the month is a fit time to prune such peaches, plumbs and cherries as have had one year's growth; which is to be done very discreetly, having regard to the vigour or weakness of the trees: Graft apples: Cut off the heads of those stocks which were inoculated last year, two inches above the bud slopewise, beginning the slope opposite the bud; and the dead wood, (called by some persons the cockspur) is to be clean cut off the second year in March, that the stock and cyon may the better incorporate and the wound be healed. Dig and clear the ground between rows of raspberries and gooseberries, which will strengthen the blossoms, and encourage the trees; and be sure to clear away all suckers and superfluous branches, and crop off all long overgrown shoots.

THE STIPULATION.

A WHITE, fond Damon, prithee tarry,
 Nor woo me to thy eager arms;
 Oh! think'st thou this a time to marry,
 When all our country's in alarms.
 In holy wedlock shall we join,
 Our land when wild invasion braves?
 Or would'st thou wish to have me thine,
 To propagate a brood of slaves?
 No! furbish up thy armour bright,
 And first thy valour let me see!
 Who for his country fears to fight,
 I fear will never stand by me.
 Then buckle on thy trusty sword,
 And when our vanquish'd foes are fled,
 I promise then, upon my word,
 To take thee to my virgin bed.
